

To our valued customers and business partners,

While the impact and outbreak of Coronavirus (COVID-19) is continuing to affect people, businesses and countries around the world, JBS Australia is doing everything in its powers to maintain production operations and supply of our high quality, safe products.

The Australian and State Governments have designated meat and food manufacturing as essential industries. As a Company, JBS will continue to operate and maintain supply of its product to our domestic and international customers.

We take this responsibility seriously and will be guided by our mission and values as we work together to continue to feed Australia and the world.

Our continued focus and priority in our business is around stringent hygiene, people and food safety, strong animal welfare outcomes and support for the communities in which we operate. We have implemented strong company-wide procedures and practices to address the potential spread of Coronavirus, consistent with the advice of both National and State Health authorities.

In addition, in order to respond to changing developments with the virus, JBS Australia has put in place a team of internal and external experts including medical professionals, to provide advice and guidance to the Company.

We extend our thoughts to all of those customers and business partners that have been negatively impacted by these events.

For JBS Australia, we continue to be open for business. We are focused on ensuring continued supply during these challenging times as we strive to meet our customers' demand requirements.

On behalf of JBS Australia, thank you for your support and our ongoing relationship.

Regards,

A handwritten signature in blue ink, appearing to read 'Brent Eastwood', is positioned below the 'Regards,' text.

Brent Eastwood
CEO, JBS Australia